Des vases en terre cuite peints à la bombe

v14427

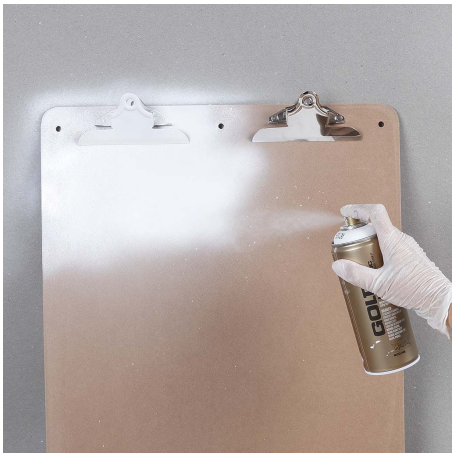
Ces vases en terre cuite sont remarquablement décorés en utilisant de la peinture en bombe, pulvérisée à travers un filtre de pulvérisation fait en filet textile.

Comment faire

1 Put down a piece of plastic to protect the surface. Place the item on the plastic and spray it with white paint in order to seal the untreated terracotta. Remember disposable gloves and good ventilation.

2 Make a spray filter from 3 pieces of layered netted fabric (table runner from the Happy Moments series). Staple them together with staples.

3 Wrap the spray filter tightly around the item. Use a dark colour spray paint first followed by a light colour spray paint. Leave to dry. Turn over the item and repeat the process on the other side. Leave to dry and now spray the entire item with a fine layer of silver dust. (This is best achieved at a long distance from the item).



4 Another variant: Use the same spray technique on other items made from different materials like, for example, this clip board.
